

Rev. Erin Grayson is an ordained Minister of Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church, USA. In various capacities, she has served Presbyterian (PCUSA), Lutheran (ELCA), United Church of Christ, and Church of England congregations across the US in Connecticut, California, and Washington state; as well as in Bahrain, a country in the Middle East.

Erin's ministry includes preaching, teaching, writing, facilitating small groups, and organizing retreats. Pastorally, she is committed to building up and inspiring communities of faith to live according to Jesus' great commandment: to love God with all your heart, soul, and mind, and to love your neighbor as yourself.

Erin is a founding member of Justice Revival, a faith-based human rights nonprofit based in Washington, DC. She also recently served as co-president of the Bainbridge Island North Kitsap Interfaith Council and board secretary of the Bainbridge Island Japanese American Exclusion Memorial Association. Erin is an active worship leader and spiritual care provider in a local volunteer senior ministry program offered by St. Barnabas Episcopal Church on Bainbridge Island.

Before becoming a minister, Erin taught French to high school students and adults, interned in the press room in the U.S. State Department, worked for Human Rights Watch in Washington DC, and conducted research on the Rwandan genocide at the Carter Center in Atlanta, GA, where she also served on the conflict resolution team. Erin and her husband Tony live on Bainbridge Island, WA. They have three great kids, Aiden (22) a recent San Diego State University graduate who works as a cybersecurity analyst in Seattle; Corinne (20), a junior at New York University studying Global Public Health; and Caleb (16), a basketball-loving junior at Bainbridge High School.
